Prehistoric People and Tools of Ohio

John Chuey, a founding member of the Mahoning Valley Archaeological Society with more than 35 years of experience, will present an illustrated talk exploring the lives of prehistoric peoples through the tools they left behind. The program will delve into flint and stone tools, ancient manufacturing techniques, and the many practical and cultural roles these tools played in daily survival. Attendees will gain insight into how early peoples shaped stone into essential implements that defined their way of life.
